

News Weekly

T.J Watt was absent from practice for the Steelers on Thursday.

The Steelers are preparing to face the Lions without key players, including linebacker T.J. Watt, who is sidelined after a lung procedure. Other players, such as Nick Herbig, Isaac Seumalo, and James Pierre, are also out due to injuries. Center Zach Frazier and safety Jabrill Peppers joined the injury report, while long snapper Christian Kuntz and defensive tackle Keanu Benton were limited participants. The coaching staff will need to adjust strategies and rely on depth players and veteran leadership to maintain team morale as they aim for a successful performance in the crucial matchup, with hopes for the injured players to return soon for postseason efforts.

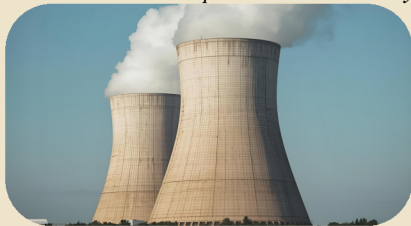

Discovery of ancient bee nests in fossils points to a never-before-seen behavior

About 90% of bee species are solitary and nest in the ground or decaying wood. Researchers recently discovered ancient bee nests in limestone caves on Hispaniola, uniquely built within fossilized bone tooth sockets. This marks the first instance of bees using bones for nesting. Lead author Lázaro Viñola-López noted it was surprising to find evidence of ancient bees in these caves, which typically contain rodents and birds, making this discovery exciting for the Caribbean.

Trump's rush to build nuclear reactors across the U.S. raises safety worries

In May, President Trump held a meeting with nuclear power executives to explore innovation and growth within the industry, specifically concentrating on small modular nuclear designs that offer safe and cost-effective energy solutions. CEO Joseph Dominguez pointed out that regulatory complexities and public perception present significant challenges, underscoring the necessity for streamlined approval processes. Trump stressed the importance of collaboration between the government and the private sector to minimize bureaucratic hurdles, fostering a sense of optimism regarding nuclear energy's contribution to energy independence and sustainability.

Italy makes a surprising discovery ahead of the Winter Olympics: dinosaur tracks

Italian authorities have announced an exciting discovery of thousands of dinosaur tracks located on nearly vertical dolomite walls in Stelvio National Park, nestled in the central Alps. These footprints were found between Livigno and Bormio, which will host events for the Winter Olympics set for February 2026. Milan's Mayor, Giuseppe Sala, highlighted that this extraordinary finding enhances the allure of the Lombardy mountains just weeks before the Olympic Games.

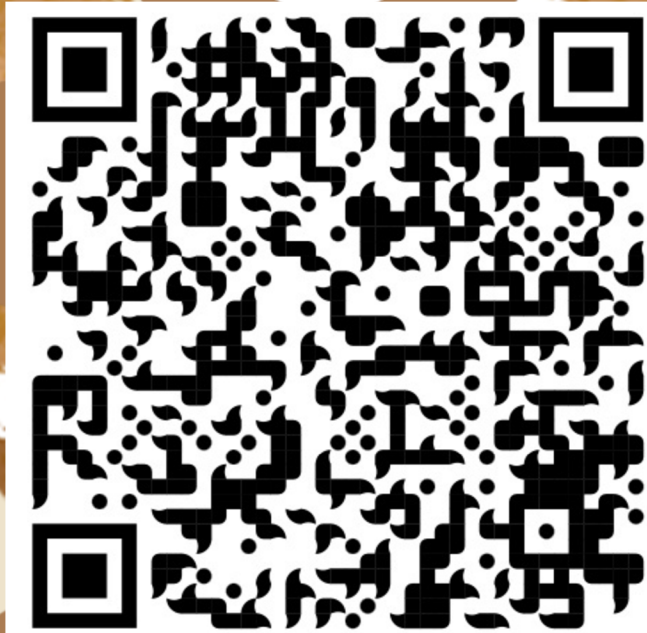

A study indicates that a volcanic eruption may have caused the plague's arrival in Europe.

When the Black Death swept through Europe in 1347, it devastated more than half of the population and significantly disrupted social structures. Recent research suggests that volcanic eruptions, previously unknown to Europeans, may have played a critical role in the onset of the pandemic. A study published in Communications Earth & Environment indicates that these eruptions led to a decline in global temperatures, resulting in crop failures and heightened fears of starvation. Wealthy Italian city-states, such as Florence and Venice, imported grain during this period, which may have inadvertently introduced plague-infected fleas aboard their ships.

Get 6 chances to guess a 5-letter word.

Peppermint S'mores Bar

Experience nostalgic s'mores with a holiday twist through Peppermint S'mores Bars, featuring creamy fluff instead of traditional marshmallows. These decadent treats offer a festive blend of peppermint and chocolate, perfect for winter gatherings, cookie swaps, or cozy nights in.

Ingredients:*

- Chocolate chips
- Marshmallow fluff
- Butter
- Graham cracker crumbs
- Peppermint pieces

- Melt butter and combine it with graham cracker crumbs to create the base.
 - Press this mixture firmly into a lined baking pan.
 - Bake until the chocolate chips are melted, then spread the melted chocolate evenly over the base.
 - Add and distribute marshmallow fluff uniformly on top.
 - Sprinkle peppermint pieces over the fluff and gently press them in.
 - Allow to cool completely before cutting into squares.
- These treats are ideal for holiday gatherings or cozy evenings.

32 Top Christmas Mocktails

If you want more Christmas recipe, scan the QR codes

White Hot Chocolate

